

My wife and I had for many years an unhappy marriage.

After our son became an adult and was self sufficient, we agreed that we should release each other and each seek happiness in our remaining years.

There was no animosity between us. We were both young enough to find someone else and remarry.

With Mr. Hanson's help, we were able to save a lot of time and legal costs by co-operating in a way that was respectful of each others' needs and feelings, to find a settlement that worked for both of us.

The agreement that he drafted for us needed very little tweaking, after we each took it to our separate legal advisors, and we were grateful to have achieved resolution, without unnecessary acrimony or delay, and be able to move on.

We are now both happily remarried and enjoying our lives.